

Barry N. Eiswerth, AIA, NA

Principal

Mr. Eiswerth brings years of award-winning experience to CDI studio one in master planning, architectural design, historic renovation and adaptive re-use, and interior design. Major universities, Fortune 100 corporations, civic organizations, and health care institutions are just a few sectors that have benefitted from his strategic planning expertise, his inventive and collaborative design concepts, and his ability to engage project partners in thoughtful and ongoing analysis.

His pioneering work on historic landmark and adaptive re-use projects in the United States, specifically the Philadelphia Bourse Building on Independence Mall in Philadelphia, established the standard for future applications nationwide. His leadership in this arena remains steadfast; in recent years, Mr. Eiswerth has been involved in additions and renovation to several American Battle Monuments Commission sites in England, New York, Hawaii, France and the Philippines. He also served as Principal-in-Charge for a complex, multi-phased master planning project for the Organization of American States, which required extensive collaboration with the National Park Service, Historic Preservation Commission and the National Capital Planning Commission.

Mr. Eiswerth earned his Bachelor of Architecture degree from Pennsylvania State University and an Architectural Association degree from the School of Architecture in London, England. He is a registered architect in three states and has earned awards of excellence for several projects including the Academy of the New Church Swedenborg Library in Bryn Athyn, Pennsylvania; Hill School Center for the Arts; and the Philadelphia Bourse Building. He has shared his expertise with the next generation of architects as an assistant professor of architectural design at Drexel University and as a thesis advisor at the Philadelphia College of Art.
